

WHITE COUNCIL INTELLIGENCE DIRECTORATE

WITNESS STATEMENT

Case Number: WCID-TA-3019-042

Classification: CONFIDENTIAL

Witness: Aragorn II Elessar

Titles:

- King of Gondor
- King of Arnor
- High King of the Reunited Kingdom

Relationship to Subject:

Son-in-Law of Lord Elrond

Credibility Rating: Exceptional

Recorded Testimony

Investigator:

Please state your relationship to Lord Elrond.

Aragorn:

Lord Elrond is my father-in-law.

I have known him for many years.

Long before my coronation.

Long before my marriage.

Investigator:

Do you believe Lord Elrond could be an individual known as "Agent Smith"?

Aragorn:

Absolutely not.

There is no chance that Lord Elrond is anything other than exactly what he appears to be.

He is one of the wisest and most honorable individuals I have ever known.

Investigator:

Have you ever observed unusual behavior?

Aragorn:

No.

Investigator:

None whatsoever?

Aragorn:

Nothing.

Investigator:

Our records indicate that you once observed Lord Elrond examining a spoon for an extended period of time.

Aragorn:

So?

Investigator:

Please elaborate.

Aragorn:

Lord Elrond appreciates craftsmanship.

The spoon in question was exceptionally well made.

Silver, balanced, elegant design.

I observed him examining it from several angles.

I would do the same if I was a patron of the arts.

Investigator:

For how long?

Aragorn:

I did not measure it.

Investigator:

Would ten minutes be accurate?

Aragorn:

I don't remember.

Investigator:

Twenty?

Aragorn:

This is silly. I was occupied with matters of state. I didn't care how long my father in law was examining the spoon.

Investigator:

Did he make any statements regarding the spoon?

Aragorn:

No.

Investigator:

Did he suggest that the spoon did not exist?

Aragorn:

What?

No.

Of course not.

Investigator:

Did he imply that reality itself might be an illusion?

Aragorn:

He didn't say anything, he just looked at it.

Some people simply admire well-crafted objects.

Investigator:

How come he didn't explain why he admired it so much? Why wouldn't he say something appreciative?

Aragorn:

I don't know. It's a spoon!

Investigator:

Do you frequently observe Lord Elrond studying spoons?

Aragorn:

No.

Investigator:

Has it happened more than once?

Aragorn:

I do not keep records of my father-in-law's interactions with cutlery.

Investigator:

Witnesses have suggested the behavior may indicate knowledge of another realm.

Aragorn:

That is absurd.

Investigator:

Why?

Aragorn:

Because I have seen many people stare at many objects.

Books, maps, jewels, swords, paintings, trees, clouds, fireplaces.

And yes, the occasional spoon.

None of these activities indicate extradimensional affiliation.

Investigator:

Then you attach no significance to the spoon incident?

Aragorn:

None.

Investigator:

Even in light of the allegations?

Aragorn:

What allegations?

Liking spoons?

You must be joking!

Investigator:

Is there anything further you would like to add?

Aragorn:

Yes.

If the White Council intends to continue questioning respected leaders of Middle-earth about spoons, I strongly recommend that someone investigate who approved this budget.

Investigator Assessment

The witness remained cooperative throughout the interview but displayed increasing frustration when discussion shifted toward spoons.

The witness strongly rejected all allegations regarding Lord Elrond and provided no evidence supporting claims of shape-shifting, extradimensional activity, or affiliation with entities known as "Agents."

Notably, the witness confirmed the existence of at least one documented spoon-related incident, though he attributed the behavior entirely to Lord Elrond's appreciation of craftsmanship.

Assessment Outcome: Testimony strongly favors innocence. However, witnesses confirmed at least one documented spoon-related incident.

Recommendation: Retain for case file. Avoid further spoon-related questioning unless new evidence emerges.
